

Public Domain Status of Works Published by the National Institute of Standards and Technology

Because current U.S. Copyright Law recognizes copyright in a manuscript at the time of preparation, it is important to establish a clear understanding of the conditions under which works from non-Government authors may be accepted for publication by the National Institute of Standards and Technology. The official NIST periodical and non-periodical series are supported in whole or in part by public funds and are printed by the U.S. Government Printing Office as “in-the-public-domain” publications. By law, official works of U.S. Government authors are not subject to copyright in the United States.

We ask non-Government authors and/or other copyright holders whose works will appear as part of an official publication sponsored or cosponsored by NIST to provide a nonexclusive license for that single instance of publication. Your agreement to this license in no way restricts your subsequent use of your work.
